THE CITRUS FAIR—OUR DUTY CONCERNING IT.

The proof of all things practical must be evolved under the test of the senses and by experiment. The people of Central and northern California have had much to say of the adaptability of large portions of the territory to the culture of citrus fruits. Last year, upon the spur of the moment, with no adequate idea of what they could do, they opened in this city a Citrus Fair exhibition. It was hastily got together, and was by no means fully representative as it could have been made.

But it was the first effort, and we hazard nothing in saying that the most surprised people of all who saw it were the residents of the sections named—not the strangers. The latter had heard so much of the wonders of California that they could very well accept what was presented without more than the usual expressions of surprise. But the people of Central and northern California had done so little missionary work for their own regions, that they had no adequate conception of the real capability of their home section. They were more than astonished, therefore, at their own exhibition.

That fair proved a wonderfully potent influence in arousing our people to a true sense of the duty they owe to the community in which they live. They have, as a result, gathered themselves for strong and unrelaxing effort in making their section of country properly known abroad. Among the first steps is the holding of a second citrus fair, which, it is anticipated, will be in a few days forwarded bodily to Chicago, as an Eastern mid-winter proof of the verity of the claims made for northern and Central California, and as a flat rebuke to the mendacious statements which have been made concerning the whole central and upper portion of the State.

The second Citrus Fair opens in this city to-day, and, from the glimpses had of it in embryo, it can safely be pronounced an emphatic success as an exhibition in the first place, and as a demonstration in the second. It is held at a season when such an event in southern California is impossible. It proves the earlier market date of our citrus fruits, and establishes our claims of marketing without possible rivalry on the part of the southern growers. It proves fully the capacity of the central and northern counties to grow for the market these fruits, in addition to the deciduous fruits: Oranges, lemons, dates, figs, olives, pomegranates, etc., besides almonds and all manner of nuts. And it proves thoroughly the fine quality of our raisins, wines and all cured fruits.

The chief attraction of California to the Eastern man is its climate; land good and yielding to his demand can be had elsewhere, but it is that "soil" which he seeks who escapes the rigors of Eastern winters. Show him, as we do to day, the fruit that will grow only in the equable and semi-tropic climate, and we give him undeniable and conclusive evidence of the character of the climate where the product was grown and harvested. We deal in climate in Central and northern California; it is the chief thing we have for sale, prior to the product of the soil. Climate above the soil is the advantage and chief value of the land. Add to this, however, land more abundant and certain in product, more easily tilled and at less cost, and we have a double claim upon the consideration of the home-seeker.

The Citrus Fair in December in Sacramento, with its wealth of semi-tropical fruits, is, therefore, the very best local means of informing the stranger with us of the actual character of the climate we have for sale, and along with which we throw in the land. It is, therefore, greatly to be desired that the people of Sacramento liberally patronize the fair and put just as many dollars and dimes into the cash-box of the Fair Association as is possible, in order to stimulate the public-spirited citizens who compose it to further endeavors, and to give them assurance that in all work of this character they shall have material support.

Moreover, it is highly important that the Association's returns shall be so great as to warrant them in forwarding the exhibits to Chicago at the close of the fair. That costs money; but it would not be possible to invest money to better advantage for the public good. The magnificent spectacle of luscious semi-tropic fruits now on display, the noble clusters of oranges, the great bunches of dates yet clinging to the stems—a tropic fruit, historians tell us, on which certain nations at one time almost wholly subsisted, the clusters of olives, the pure olive oil made in the valley, the fine valley and foothill wines, the raisins, the winter vegetables of California, the nuts, the banana blossoms and fruit, the melons—ripe in mid-winter, the lemons and limes; all these exhibited at the East, when the icy king has locked the lakes and laid his frosty hand upon the whole face of the country, will be a revelation to the millions three thousand miles beyond us toward sunrise.

They have had such an exhibition from southern California, but they expect it from that region; its coming had been long and loudly heralded. Of Central California they expect nothing like it; their judgments, warped by false statements diligently promulgated, permits them to associate with the word northern California only thoughts of snow and ice, and the rigors of winter as they know it. Let me be so bountiful in our patronage of the fair here, as to give the Association the funds needed to place the exhibits on view at Christmas in the East, and thus at once and forever disabuse the public mind of these false impressions, and at the same time do ourselves wonderfully good and profitable service.

INSUFFICIENT EXPLANATION.

The explanation is made by the Examiner that the startling aggregate of arrests for crime in San Francisco, cited by Dr. Sprecher in his recent sermon, is arrived at by including arrests for violation of city ordinances—as a rule, minor offenses—the inclusion of several hundred arrests of Chinese for gaming and keeping of opium dens, and the incarceration of 900 persons for vagrancy. We do not see how this helps the matter. The comparisons made by the preacher were with other great cities where there are also arrests for violation of city ordinances and for vagrancy. The raids upon Chinese for keeping lottery shops and opium joints are legitimately to be included in the annuals of criminal arrests. The opium dens are frequented most largely by whites, and scarcely any influences in the country are more demoralizing or corrupting. As for the lotteries, they are seeds of crime of the most vicious character, and represent a criminality that demands the most vigorous laws and their strict enforcement. Certainly the two grades of crime named were properly included by Dr. Sprecher in his estimate of the moral condition of San Francisco.

REDDING, December 12th.—The county exhibits for the Citrus Fair from this town, through the efforts of D. N. Horn, employes the increased pay and reduced hours tie-up was ordered this morning, and 100 men went out. The company, however, ran several cars during the day, with new men.

The strike on the Sutter Street Railroad and its branches continues. This company is now also running a number of cars, and is increasing them each day as fast as new men are broken in.
